Louise Green has earned fitness expert status on an international scale.

Louise is a visionary, fitness activist and change agent dedicated to creating a world where every “body” can realize their athletic potential, regardless of their size.

As a Personal Trainer her work has transcended many lives well beyond the gym. Green has tenaciously dedicated the last 14 years to disrupting the fitness industry as we know it.

Louise’s work spans the globe. She has coached and influenced thousands of women to put their intimidation aside and live their athletic dreams in the body they have right now. Louise’s vision for impactful world health relies on three pillars of change: Inclusive representation in health and fitness media and advertising, appropriate fitness services that engage people living in larger bodies to move and a fitness industry well educated on size inclusive fitness leadership. Louise believes this perfect storm has the incredible power to mobilize millions of sedentary people to move on a grand scale.

For more than a decade she has worked diligently on each angle of the triangle, daily.

Louise has been a pioneer in offering dedicated size-specific fitness services since 2007. She expanded her career to work with brands and ad agencies to hone a more size-inclusive message and is developing the first size-inclusive fitness certification to better equip trainers and gyms to be more inclusive.

Louise Green is a celebrated Author, Influencer and Award-Winning Fitness Trainer. Louise has been changing the narrative and idealistic standards of our fitness culture.

To kick off her career, she opened the first plus-size exclusive boot camps in Canada in 2007 and the rest is literally, history.

Louise has worked the trenches for 14 years, banking over 15,000 hours physically training women who are considered outside the "cultural norm". Louise has refined a unique intelligence into how this group is motivated and responds to fitness practices and messaging.

Louise Founded Big Fit Girl, after forging a global movement following the release of her book (Big Fit Girl). Big Fit Girl is now a brand, a hub for coaching programs, a book, a monthly SELF magazine column, a podcast and a size inclusive fitness app.

Louise is the voice that thousands of women rely on to change their, often broken, relationship with fitness and their bodies. Her movement allows for women to unearth their inner athlete and love their bodies, at every size in a climate where that remains a controversial and revolutionary act.

Big Fit Girl has welcomed and supported women into the family from 15 countries, globally.

Louise and Big Fit Girl knows that the language of acceptance is universal.
Louise's pioneering work has been featured by some of the world's most recognizable media outlets. Throughout her career, her work has been featured in over 150 editorial, radio and television features.

She regularly offers her expertise and knowledge to media and brands who are interested in her pursuit to level the playing field and bring size-inclusive fitness to the forefront.

Louise is a regular columnist at SELF Magazine and has written for Refinery 29, The Huffington Post, XO Jane, iRun and the The Guardian.

Louise has been featured on television at NBC's The Steve Harvey Show, Australia's The Morning Show and the UK's ITV, This Morning.

Louise's most memorable media moment was spending the day at the BBC in London, interviewing for 7 different shows for her book Big Fit Girl. Born in England growing up with the BBC, and a child of the 80's, sitting in the waiting room with Bananarama was something she will never forget!
Green changed the fitness section at the bookstores when she released her ground-breaking book, Big Fit Girl, offering a new perspective of what it means to be an athlete.

The book has sold internationally with an overwhelming positive response influencing women everywhere to lace up and get active.

Green toured Canada, the USA and the UK with sponsored book tours by Forever 21, Penningtons and Addition Elle. Louise conducted over 80 media interviews while promoting the book. These interviews brought about both positive conversation and pushback; however, Green is unshakable in her position that larger bodies, can indeed, be fit bodies.

Her latest book, Fitness for Everyone, is coming out December 29th, 2020 and shows practical workouts for people of every size, age and ability. Fitness for Everyone is one of the first fitness books to show inclusive fitness for amputees and paraplegics alongside abled bodied models.
